City Hall forcing its sewage on River Road

One of last vestiges of simpler times, where riverfront property is affordable and commercial developers are kept at bay, being invaded by City Hall ◗ Quiet dead end along the Schuylkill

Steps away from the bustle of Manayunk sits a nearly mile-long stretch of wooded housing butting up against the Schuylkill River.

Although many residents consider the area, which some call Shawmont Valley, to be a forgotten community, it has recently come to into the unwanted spotlight due to City Hall's continuing quest to install municipal sewer lines under the narrow street — at a significant cost to both the city and residents.

"Considering the fact that we, as in the whole community, don't ask the city for much, this is messed up," said resident Cody Nelson-Petrucci, whose household received a letter about a month ago that construction would soon begin. "We have to put in pipes underground from our house to the street and it will cost us $5,000. We weren't ever asked if we wanted this."

"The city doesn't even come down when the river floods or the roads are blocked by snow — the neighbors are out here helping each other with hoses or shovels," he said. "We're not a pain in the city's neck, so why bother us?"

On River Road, track houses and trailers share space with historical mansions, and boats and jet skis outnumber cars nearly two to one. Many here worry that the sewer lines, technically a legal requirement, would encourage commercial development in the only area of the city where Schuylkill waterfront property can still be bought.

The houses existed without sewer connections despite a law to the contrary, but the illegality makes new construction extremely difficult. "I think that's why the city wants sewers, so developers can build," said John Osada.

▶ Cody Nelson-Petrucci, right, with friend Gabby Dillman yesterday on River Road, said it will cost his family $5,000 if forced by the city to install a sewer line.

Little-known

Even MapQuest doesn't know how to map it.

- Despite its appearance on many maps and GPS systems to the contrary, River Road is no longer a throughway.
- The end of the street, where Montgomery County begins, has been blocked off to car traffic since the W.C. Hamilton & Sons paper mill closed in 1995.
- "I've tried to contact MapQuest because trucks keep coming, thinking the old paper mill is still there. They take down wires and poles when they get stuck," Coyle said. "But they ignore me. I don't think anybody knows what this place is like." METRO/AW

$4 million sewer expense

A Water Department official estimated that the 30 or so properties along River Road comprise a portion of the estimated 1,800 homes of 470,000 total properties in Philadelphia not connected to city sewer systems.

In a recent City Council meeting, Councilman Curtis Jones Jr. put the cost of sewer installation for the neighborhood in the $4 million range and attempted to explain the resistance of his constituents.

"These unique people have a different lifestyle," he said. "They are at one with the river and they have adapted their lifestyle to it."

But, for many River Road residents, City Hall is worlds away. "I didn't know who [Jones] was until you brought him up," said Nelson-Petrucci.

Quoted

"To get a permit to build here, you almost have to kill somebody. For me to put property in, I would've had to have a sidewalk and a curb built for the entire street."

The body appeared to have been submerged for an extended time and was badly decomposed.

The man was reported missing last Tuesday, but police are not releasing his identity pending family notification. The Medical Examiner's office will do an examination to determine if foul play was involved. METRO/AW NORTHEAST PHILADELPHIA. A 9-year-old is critical after somehow climbing behind the wheel of his parents' car and crashing yesterday morning.

The boy was driving the family Chevy Malibu northbound on the 7900 block of Roosevelt Boulevard shortly before 9:15 a.m. when he lost control, crossed the median and slammed into a tree. The car overturned on impact and came to a rest right before Rhawn Street.

The boy was rushed to St. Christopher Hospital. A police spokeswoman had no idea how he ended up behind the wheel. METRO

‘Occupy Philly’ takes time prepping protest

No lack of potential protesters 150-plus showed up Thursday for group’s first meeting Some handed out flyers yesterday in LOVE Park

Originally planned to take place inside the Wooden Shoe bookstore, a crowd of more 150 people came to check out the first meeting of “Occupy Philadelphia” Thursday and overwhelmed the small business.

Instead, the crowd streamed north to the Arch Street United Methodist Church to debate the plans to their first protest, which may take place this week — already three weeks since protesters began camping out on Wall Street in Lower Manhattan.

POST YOUR COMMENTS: WWW.METRO.US/PHL

The planning meeting involved creation of smaller committees to be in charge of various pieces of the protest. These committees varied from security, medics and media outreach to training participants in nonviolent confrontation.

“This is the alleged cradle of freedom, it would be nice to see some freedom taking place,” said lawyer Lawrence Krasner, one of two attorneys working with the movement. “Sadly, Philadelphia is no more intolerant of free speech than New York and Seattle on many occasions.”

There was much excitement among those at the meeting that this movement — which will involve long-term occupation of a public space — will be effective.

“People would march a day, and it wouldn’t change anything,” said Jody Dodd. “People here just want to carry the message that 99 percent are fed up.”

Meeting again tomorrow

The eight people gathered yesterday at LOVE Park were not yet sure where they intended to occupy when Occupy Philly does eventually make its stand; they were simply continuing to stir the pot locally.

“We are the best-organized outreach arm of the Occupy movement in the country,” said Steve Ross.

“In general, organization is our weakness and chaos is our strength,” another member Jacob Russell said of movement’s work in New York City so far. “But we want to rouse people’s curiosity.”

Holding clipboards and flyers, members assured that they wanted to amass as many people as possible before settling on a location and ethos.

Occupy Philly will hold a general assembly meeting 6:30 p.m. tomorrow at Arch Street United Methodist Church on Broad and Arch streets. ALEX

Ozone hole over the Arctic

NEW YORK. Ozone loss over the Arctic this year was so severe that for the first time it could be called an "ozone hole" like the Antarctic one, scientists report.

About 13 miles above the ground, 80 percent of the ozone usually there was lost, they reported in the journal Nature.

The cause was an unusually long spell of cold weather at altitude, because in cold conditions chemicals that destroy ozone are at their most active.

It is currently impossible to predict if such losses will occur again, the team, from NASA'S Jet Propulsion Laboratory, wrote. METRO

Protesters arrested

NEW YORK. Police reopened the Brooklyn Bridge Saturday evening after more than 700 anti-Wall Street protesters were arrested for blocking traffic lanes and attempting an unauthorized march across the span.

The arrests took place when a large group of marchers broke off from others on the bridge's pedestrian walkway and headed across the Brooklyn-bound lanes.

Most of those who were arrested were taken into custody off the bridge, issued summonses and released. REUTERS

Apple's new No. 1 to unveil iPhone 5?

With Steve Jobs out, Tim Cook will take center stage at latest product event New phone must 'wow' consumers in bad economy, analysts say

Tim Cook finally gets his chance to stride out from under Steve Jobs' shadow, and he could not have picked a better time or device to mark his unofficial debut as Apple Inc.'s CEO.

The latest generation of the iPhone — still the smartphone industry's gold standard after four years — is expected to see the light of day tomorrow, just in time for the holidays.

Even in a dismal economy, consumers should again line up in droves for a souped-up device that also marks Cook's first major product launch since taking over from Jobs in August.

The so-called iPhone 5 is widely expected to have a bigger touch-screen and faster processor than the current iPhone 4, which helped the company stay a step ahead of rivals in an increasingly competitive smartphone market.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Cook

Its challenge will be to "wow" consumers with yet more game-changing innovations and top itself. The aging iPhone 4 is still an unqualified blockbuster: With more than 20 million sold in the third quarter that ended June 25 alone, it is likely to become the world's top-selling smartphone.

But the latest version of the gadget that helped define the smartphone category is coming at a time when the world economy is slowing and competition is at its peak. More than 550,000 Google Android-based devices — including tablets — are activated each day globally. REUTERS

What's Cooking?

Cook is likely to take the stage at Apple central at Cupertino's 1 Infinite Loop. Although a highly regarded executive, he is not known for pitching products.

"Most interesting is whether ... Cook will lead the keynote," said Sterne Agee analyst Shaw Wu.

New trend: Discount on college education

Schools are taking a little bit off the top as potential students hesitate to enroll More applicants translate to more money for some colleges

What do most companies do when they are trying to move a product? They have a sale. Now colleges are jumping on the same bandwagon.

Introducing: tuition discounts! It comes at a time when students and families are more hesitant than ever to invest exorbitant amounts of money into higher education.

Schools are offering these discounts through a number of qualifications including early enrollment, academic achievements and even certain majors.

While the incentive is certainly attractive to budget-conscious families, SmartMoney.com says it's also an attempt by colleges to boost their rankings. Discounts could attract more applicants, giving the college lower acceptance rates. This can make it look more desirable and even boost its rankings.

$21K

Seton Hall University recently announced its new tuition discount, offering students $21,000 off the sticker price for early applicants who meet certain academic requirements.

Those who enroll in Duquense University's School of Education will receive a 50 percent discount on the $26,400 tuition. Grace College will offer a three-year degree program that saves students about 50 percent on the cost of college, according to official estimates.

Columbia college is offering a tuition guarantee that the cost ($16,532) will remain the same for all four (or five) years, instead of the average increase of 4 percent per year.

FIGHT ON AGAINST THIS DEADLY FOE

Progress in treatment, moves toward a cure But still nearly a quarter of a million American woman will die from breast cancer this year

October: BREAST CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

Too many of us know someone who has been affected by breast cancer. Too many have suffered breast cancer directly. It is one of the biggest killers in the Western world, where the incidence of the disease is at its highest. Metro is proud to again promote breast cancer awareness and the events happening all month. We urge you to support this most worthy of causes.

TONY METCALF, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

As the United States marks Breast Cancer Awareness Month this October, it is reassuring to think that modern medicine is making major strides forward in the fight against the disease.

And, indeed, that is the case.

From the 1940s until the 1980s, the number of new cases of breast cancer rose by about 1 percent per year — most likely due to a big increase in the amount of mammography screening.

But as better screening and detection came on to the scene, the level of new cases fell away in the 1990s and continued to do so in the early years of this century.

Researchers believe that is because of reduced use of post-menopausal hormones in women, which were found to bring an increased risk of breast cancer.

Ethnic difference

Breast cancer in the U.S. by race and ethnicity:

- In the United States, since 1975 the incidence of new cases of breast cancer has increased at a faster rate among white women than among black women.
- At the same time, the incidence of death among white women has decreased — while in black women it has increased.
- White women still have the highest proportionate occurrence of breast cancer per head of population.
- American Indian or Alaskan Native women have the lowest incidence – only about 60 percent of that of white women.
- Women of Asian descent have an incidence rate of around 80 percent of that of white women; Hispanic women have an incidence of around 75 percent of that of white women.

And, as Metro reports constantly, America's medical community is at the forefront of the search for new treatments and, hopefully, a cure for the disease.

Yet there is a sobering figure to consider.

In 2011, despite all the advances, it is estimated that there will be more than 230,000 new cases of invasive breast cancer among American women — and more than 2,100 in American men.

An estimated 39,000 American women will die this year from the disease in addition to 450 men, according to U.S. Department of Health figures.

So, the fight goes on.

The month of October will see dozens of events across the country — including many right here in Philadelphia — aimed at raising awareness of, and raising money for research into, breast cancer.

WHAT YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT BREAST CANCER

CREATAS

As National Breast Cancer Awareness Month highlights the second most common form of cancer in women (after skin cancer), medical professionals can't stress preventive measures strongly enough.

"It's proven that a healthy diet and exercise help prevent breast cancers," says Dr. Parisa Lotfi, a radiologist at Boston's Faulkner Hospital's Sagoff Centre. "Obesity is a risk factor."

"Learn the basics of healthy eating, including plant-based diets," urges oncologist Dr. Leonard Farber, founder of Manhattan's Farber Center for Radiation Oncology, which specializes in emerging technologies and integrative treatment.

Equally important is regular screening. Breast radiology usually involves a mammogram, which can detect small lesions that aren't noticeable by physical exams.

"Never miss a screening. Follow guidelines to catch tumors early," says Dr. Farber.

"Catching these means a good prognosis," says Dr. Lotfi. In the U.S., women with no family history of breast cancer aren't advised to get annual mammograms until age 40. Dr. Lotfi recommends younger women should have annual breast exams by a physician or gynecologist. Also important are monthly self-administered exams.

Quoted

"Never miss a screening, follow guidelines to catch tumors early. Catching these means a good prognosis."
DR. LENOARD FARBER

Women and men should be on the lookout for small, immovable lumps in both their breasts and armpits.

"Breast cancer in younger women without a family history of the disease is more rare, but when it does occur it's usually a more aggressive type of cancer," she says.

Treatment for tumors includes surgery, chemotherapy, radiation, hormonal therapy and biologically targeted therapy. There are alternative therapies, too. New developments include options such as Accuboost targeted breast radiation.

"It's noninvasive. It targets the cancer to deliver a dose of radiation that we know works," Dr. Farber explains.

LINDA CLARKE

Breathe in, don't panic

One thing patients shouldn't do is panic.

"It's important to take a breath and say, is this the only option? If it doesn't sit right, ask questions," says Dr. Farber. "Hospitals are a business, bottom line. So, hunt around. Choose your treatment, choose your team. We try to empower the patient as much as possible."

MY INSPIRATIONAL STORY OF SURVIVAL

Singer, activist and breast cancer survivor Melissa Etheridge received a star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame this week, an event she hopes can be an inspiration to anyone facing adversity or dreaming of a better life.

Grammy winner Etheridge, 50, who is known for her fusion of folk-blues rock in hits like "Come to My Window," was greeted by hundreds of fans outside the Hard Rock Cafe in Hollywood as she unveiled her coveted star.

"Let my life be an inspiration to anyone — gay, straight, breast cancer, woman, mother, any human being who receives the inspiration from my story," said Etheridge at the unveiling that took place in conjunction with the launch of a "Pinktober" campaign supporting breast cancer research.

"Let my life be an inspiration to anyone — gay, straight, breast cancer, woman ... any human being."
ETHERIDGE

"You can have a dream that you can grown up in a small Midwestern town and believe, and desire, and create a life and end up with a star on the Walk of Fame on Hollywood Boulevard," she said.

The Kansas native has released 10 studio albums over her 25-year career; the multi-platinum 1993 CD, "Yes I Am," garnering chart success and international recognition.

Etheridge, who counts winning the Oscar for "I Need to Wake Up" from the environmental movie "An Inconvenient Truth" and singing with Bruce Springsteen among career highlights, still finds herself surprised with the global success of her songs.

"When I realized that my music was being listened to internationally, it meant so much to me," said Etheridge. "It started to become very obvious to me that music is an international language."

Alongside her music career, Etheridge became a voice for gay rights after publicly coming out as a lesbian in 1993. An active spokeswoman, Etheridge, who was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2004, also became an Artist Ambassador for the Pinktober breast cancer awareness campaign.

Her star on the Walk of Fame marked the official start of this year's Pinktober effort, which will see numerous special events, concerts and limited edition merchandise available at Hard Rock establishments around the world. REUTERS

'Keep A Breast' tour

Electro-pop duo UH HUH HER, consisting of keyboardist Leisha Hailey and guitarist Camila Grey, are headlining the House of Blues Entertainment's Keep A Breast music tour throughout October.

The tour promoting breast cancer prevention and awareness kicks off next Saturday at the Theatre of the Living Arts.

"I became a part of Keep A Breast since, like so many others, I've been directly affected by breast cancer in my family," said Grey, whose grandmothers are survivors. "Awareness and education are so important in treating this disease — since if it's detected early enough, chances of survival are greatly increased."

Franklin Mills to 'celebrate women'

Philly's largest shopping complex begins its first monthlong initiative in honor of Breast Cancer Awareness Wellness Expo last weekend of October

Franklin Mills, Philadelphia's largest value retail shopping center, is holding its first "Celebrating Women" event.

The month-long initiative offers female shoppers exclusive discounts, health awareness programs and fashion presentations and includes a business clothing drive to benefit Dress for Success Philadelphia.

"'Celebrating Women' is our way to empower women of all ages through fashion and self-expression," said Franklin Mills' director of marketing Donna Danielson.

"This effort will showcase our unique brand of shopping with fashion forward outlet and value retailers, while engaging women who play a vital role in our society as mothers, caregivers, business leaders and community activists."

The event kicks off this Wednesday with a girls night out at Dave & Buster's from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. featuring $5 pink-tini cocktails and karaoke.

A 5K mall walk will be held Oct. 22 to benefit the American Cancer Society, which will host several presentations throughout the month, including one addressing breast health.

Retailers will support the walk with in-store events including modeling demonstrations, personal shoppers, giveaways, entertainment and refreshments.

The month will culminate in the Women's Wellness Expo on Oct. 29 and 30, a free informational event in which more than 30 local vendors will provide health screening and healthy living tips.

HOW YOU CAN HELP SOMEONE WITH CANCER

We've likely all told someone going through a rough time, "I'm here if you need anything." But what are some concrete things you can do to show your support? We asked Anne Marie Paolucci, whose nonprofit Chemo Comfort is profiled on page 14, for some ideas. It turns out that there are plenty of little things you can do to make a big impact.

MEREDITH ENGEL
meredith.engel@metro.us

FIXLAND

▶ Just being there goes a long way. But is there more you can do?

▶ Treat them the same
"I was always happy when someone would call and have a normal conversation with me or complain about something going on in their lives — but you need to listen [in case] that someone's not in the mood that particular day. I remember a friend calling with a problem and then saying, 'I cant believe I'm telling you this!' It's like no, you're treating me as your friend, and not your cancer patient friend, and that's a nice thing to hear sometimes."

▶ Be honest, but sensitive
"I always appreciated someone saying to me, 'I don't know what to say to you,' as opposed to, saying things [like] 'Your hair'll grow back, you'll be OK.' The hair is a big deal because it's a symbol of so many things. You're losing yourself and you're becoming 'cancer patient.' And it's a symbol of what's going on inside you, it's like this lack of control and this battle between cancer and chemo."

▶ Help out with errands
"Stick within your forte. Like if you're an accountant: 'I'd be happy to come balance your checkbook.' A huge thing is medical bills: 'Can I spend an afternoon helping you go through that?' If it's somebody who's nearby, call when you're going to the grocery store, the drugstore or the dry cleaners: 'Can I drop something off or pick something up for you?' Accompany someone to a medical appointment, or give them a ride to or from."

▶ Bring some cheer
Round up some funny movies and head on over to their place. "Humor's great," Paolucci says. "It's healing. It takes you out of those [dark] places."

WRITE TO METRO:
LETTERS@METRO.US

▶ If you want to cook, ask first
"Through chemo, there's things that just turn your stomach for no apparent reason," she says. "I think it's worth a conversation saying, 'I'd like to bring you a meal, what works best for you?' It's probably better to stay away from spicy foods or anything that's crusty or with edges because you have a lot of oral issues, depending on the chemo."

▶ Be wary of sniffles
"If you are at all unwell, no matter what you said you would do for the person, you'll do more for them if you say, 'I think I'm getting sick, be honest if you don't want me around.' Because if someone's counts are down, they don't want to be anywhere near you. You could put them in the hospital if they end up with an infection. It's really serious, so don't think, 'Oh I'll just sniffle my way around this, it'll be fine.' Really be honest."

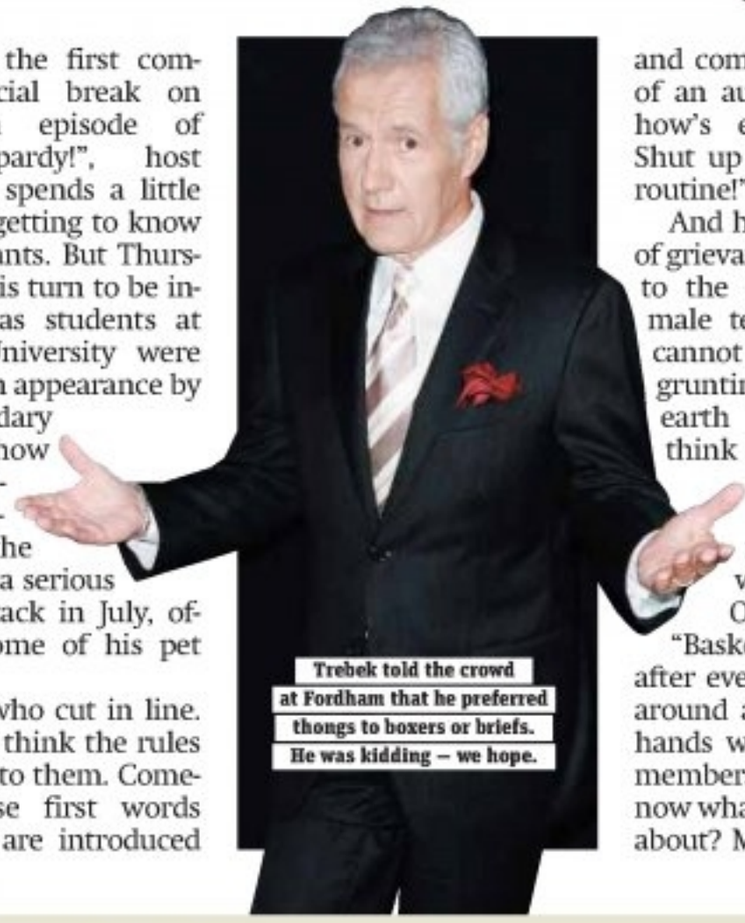
THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

This TV host likes thongs — and also not grunting

After the first commercial break on each episode of "Jeopardy!", host Alex Trebek spends a little bit of time getting to know the contestants. But Thursday it was his turn to be interviewed, as students at Fordham University were treated to an appearance by the legendary game show host. The 71-year-old Trebek, on the mend from a serious burglary attack in July, offered up some of his pet peeves.

"People who cut in line. People who think the rules don't apply to them. Comedians whose first words when they are introduced and come onstage in front of an audience [are]: 'Hey, how's everybody doing?' Shut up and get into your routine!"



Trebek told the crowd at Fordham that he preferred thongs to boxers or briefs. He was kidding — we hope.

And he's got a whole list of grievances when it comes to the sports world. "Female tennis players who cannot hit a ball without grunting — when on earth did that start? I think back to Billie Jean King, Chris Everet, Sharapova — they never grunted that way."

Others on his list: "Basketball players who after every free throw turn around and have to bump hands with the other four members of their team — now what the hell is all that about? My biggest peeve is for those clowns at golf tournaments, when someone hits an approach shot from 150 yards away and they yell at the top of their lungs, 'Go in the hole!' Shoot the SOB, please!"

Yikes. Sounds like there's a lot you can do to piss off Trebek. But if you ever get the chance to meet him, and you're tempted to sing the "Jeopardy!" tune to him, don't worry: He won't get mad. "It's a sign of love," he told Metro after his talk. "It's a sign of familiarity. It means they like the program and that makes me feel good."

— With additional reporting by Meredith Engel

Some get bigger slice of the Pie

Things could get awkward on the "American Reunion" set if the subject of paychecks ever comes up, as producers reportedly snagged a return appearance by Tara Reid for much less than other cast members. Reid signed on with the picture — a sequel to "American Pie" — for a reported $250,000, according to the Hollywood Reporter, while co-stars Jason Biggs and Seann William Scott each got $5 million and a share of grosses. Alyson Hannigan earned a reported $3 million. The rest of the cast, including Chris Klein and Shannon Elizabeth, reportedly made between $500,000 and $750,000 each.

Kutcher no longer following wife on Twitter

Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore have reportedly been working all summer to save their relationship, though it appears the efforts were in vain. "[Demi] and Ashton had been receiving counseling from Kabbalah over the summer to try to fix their marriage," a source tells Entertainment Tonight, adding that the couple have been living apart for some time. Moore is said to be "sad, hurt and embarrassed" by Kutcher's latest cheating scandals and rumors about an impending split. She's likely also troubled by the fact that Kutcher is no longer following her on Twitter.

The feed ...

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Ashton Kutcher is possibly addressing rumors about his impending divorce, Joel McHale knows the truth, Jonah Hill sees ridiculous things everywhere and Steve Martin is making some changes.

@aplusk: "When you ASSUME to know that which you know nothing of you make an ASS out of U and ME"

@joelmchale: Come on guys, give it a break. Nancy Grace's nipple did not "slip out". It was trying to escape.

@JonahHill: Saw a guy texting on a Segway. If he was texting anything but "Everyone's laughing at me" then he was wrong.

@SteveMartinToGo: After much thought, I have decided to use my sense of humor for good rather than for evil.

Talking points

Clooney takes on Us Weekly

George Clooney is rushing to ex-girlfriend Elisabetta Canalis' defense after an article in Us Weekly claimed she'd sent angry text messages to Clooney and his current girlfriend, Stacy Keibler. "I never comment on my personal life unless it affects others, and this lie affects others," Clooney said in a statement to the magazine. "Since I would be the only actual witness, I ask you to correct your story immediately — but that would assume you cared at all about telling the truth."

Taking in Radiohead

Exes Ryan Reynolds and Scarlett Johansson continue to prove to the world how amicable their split was, this time stepping out together to take in a Radiohead concert in New York City, according to Us Weekly. "Ryan and Scarlett came in together right before the show started and just watched, rocked out and left together," says a source. "They just seemed like good friends."

Wedding planning rough on Cowell

Simon Cowell admits that with "The X-Factor" taking up so much of his time, his love life — and impending nuptials — have to take a back seat. "It has probably been the busiest year I've ever had. Making the choice to get married is something you just have to decide when the time is right," Cowell says, according to Hollyscoop. And his rep is quick to dash rumors that Cowell and fiancee Mezhgan Hussainy are on the outs. "You might have to wait 20 years for Simon to plan a wedding, but they are as close as they have ever been," the rep insists.

Skipping the highlights reel

In celebration of 10 years, the Motion Pictures fest presents an all-new program of dance on film and video

An anniversary can often be a time for looking back, which Terry Fox realized when assembling the program for the 10th annual "Motion Pictures" mini-fest of dance on film and video.

"This is our 10th year, so we could have just looked at the great stuff that we've shown already," says Fox, executive director of Philadelphia Dance Projects. "But there's a lot out there that just doesn't get visibility. It's not a genre that gets shown a lot."

So to ring in its second decade, the festival, co-curated by Fox and PhillyCAM executive director Gretjen Clausing, will offer four diverse, new works over two nights. These include a program of short pieces, a documentary on dance pioneer Anna Halprin and Philly institution Group Motion, and a discussion with filmmaker Nadine Patterson, composer Lenny Seidman and choreographer Zane Booker about Patterson's new mock-umentary, "Tango Macbeth."

The final program, Charles Atlas' documentary "Merce Cunningham: A Lifetime in Dance," reflects on the groundbreaking company on the eve of its dissolution. "He's an icon for us in modern dance," Fox says of Cunningham, who died in 2009. "I'm hoping that people will come see it, lest we forget."

He's with cancer

Can disease be funny? Will Reiser turned his own tragedy into '50/50,' co-starring his pal Seth Rogen He says he learned a lot in the process

GETTY IMAGES

Will Reiser is reportedly six years in remission.

Screenwriter Will Reiser looks back on his own battle with a rare form of spinal cancer in "50/50," with Joseph Gordon-Levitt standing in for him as Adam, a young radio producer dealing with a life-changing diagnosis. But when it came to casting Adam's best friend, the obvious choice was Reiser's real-life best friend, Seth Rogen (who also serves as a producer on the film).

You were in the unique position of writing a character based on your best friend that would be played by that same best friend.

I'm really proud of the performance Seth gave. I think that he did a really great job. And I think a part of that is Joe — not to discredit Seth, but Joe is so real and so grounded that I think that it made it really easy for Seth to play off him. ... The character's not necessarily Seth, per se. It's sort of an extension of Seth. There are definitely elements of his personality that I incorporated. Like when we were that age, I was a neurotic mess — I worried about everything. I was really uptight, and Seth would just make fun of me.

And you're not a neurotic mess anymore?

I'm a much different person. It sounds cliche to say that, but I think going through that experience, writing about it, I think it brought me out of my shell a little bit. In the movie, with Joe and Seth's characters, it's not like they sit around and talk about their feelings. And that's very much how Seth and I were. It wasn't like we dealt with it by talking about how we felt. We just made jokes.

How much changed from the script to the finished film?

The overall arc of the movie never changed. That was always pretty consistent. I learned a lot about what worked and what didn't work.

You've got this tag line, "It takes a pair to beat the odds." That might make people think it's about testicular cancer.

I've heard that before. Well, as long as people see the movie. ... If anything, I think this movie can be cathartic for other people. And that actually has been the most gratifying part of showing this movie to people, is when they come up and say, "I connected with that. I went through some-

Q&A

Why the title change from "I'm With Cancer"?

We tested that along with a bunch of other titles, and we just found that "I'm With Cancer" just kind of scared audiences away — just the idea of cancer. Which is interesting because our whole marketing campaign is really about being honest about it and not trying to hide. I liked the idea of cancer being in the title because, you know, when I set out to write the movie I really wanted to challenge the idea of what's acceptable to talk about in film.

'Dolphin Tale' leaps to top of weekend box office

COURTESY OF WARNER BROS.

▶ It's a jungle out there: "Dolphin Tale" beat last week's champ, "The Lion King."

Family film "Dolphin Tale" jumped to the top of the movie box office over the weekend, unseating "The Lion King" and beating four newcomers, according to studio estimates released yesterday.

"Dolphin Tale," which had finished third when it debuted a week earlier, took in $14.2 million over three days at U.S. and Canadian theaters. The movie is based on the true story of a dolphin that gets snared by a crab trap and is rehabilitated with a prosthetic tail.

Baseball drama "Moneyball," starring Brad Pitt, finished second with $12.5 million. The 3-D makeover of animated classic "The Lion King," box-office champ for the two previous weekends, fell to third with $11.1 million.

"Dolphin Tale" was released by Warner Bros., a unit of Time Warner Inc. Columbia Pictures, a unit of Sony Corp., released "Moneyball," and Walt Disney Co. distributed "The Lion King." REUTERS

Pharrell Williams ‘all excited’

‘There’s no social life, but that’s OK,’ says the songwriter/producer/entrepreneur — and now creative director of Karmaloop TV He hints that he may help bring J.T. out of his busy filming schedule to make more music

Pharrell wears many hats. This is only one of them, figuratively and literally.

Pharrell Williams is aware of the consequences of his busy schedule.

Williams’ latest title is the creative director of Karmaloop TV, which is currently an online destination at www.karmalooptv.com but is vying to be a full-fledged cable channel. The site has begun its first big push with an initiative dubbed Reclaim Your TV, which hopes to draw in the first generation that never knew life without Internet.

“We’re ‘live and let live’ type of people,” says Williams of the Reclaim slogan. “We just want to bring people the content that we miss and the things that we’d want to see.”

Quoted

“Being a partner in a network is a big move; but at the same time, contributing to all things creative there is an honor.”

When do you think TV got to a point where it needed to be reclaimed?
Well, it’s not really the networks’ fault, or the cable providers’ fault. It’s the fact that the Internet has just made everything so abundant. ... There’s so many different choices out there, and I could see how it could be confusing at times, and it’s hard to remain focused. But that’s what we’re intent on doing. We intend to do a couple of things right, not 20 million things.

You have so many different ventures you’re involved in, including clothing and liquor. How do you define the spark that has to be there for you to invest your time and money?
I’m always up for the challenge, and it’s always got to make sense. ... Being a partner in a network is a big move; but at the same time, contributing to all things creative there is an honor.

Let’s talk about music. Are you still finding time to get into the studio?
Yeah, everything from on the pop side from like Jay Sean all the way to Jay-Z.

How about J.T.? I’ve heard rumors that you’ve even been working with Justin Timberlake again.
I heard those rumors too.

Are they true?
I’m not one to talk, but we’re all excited.

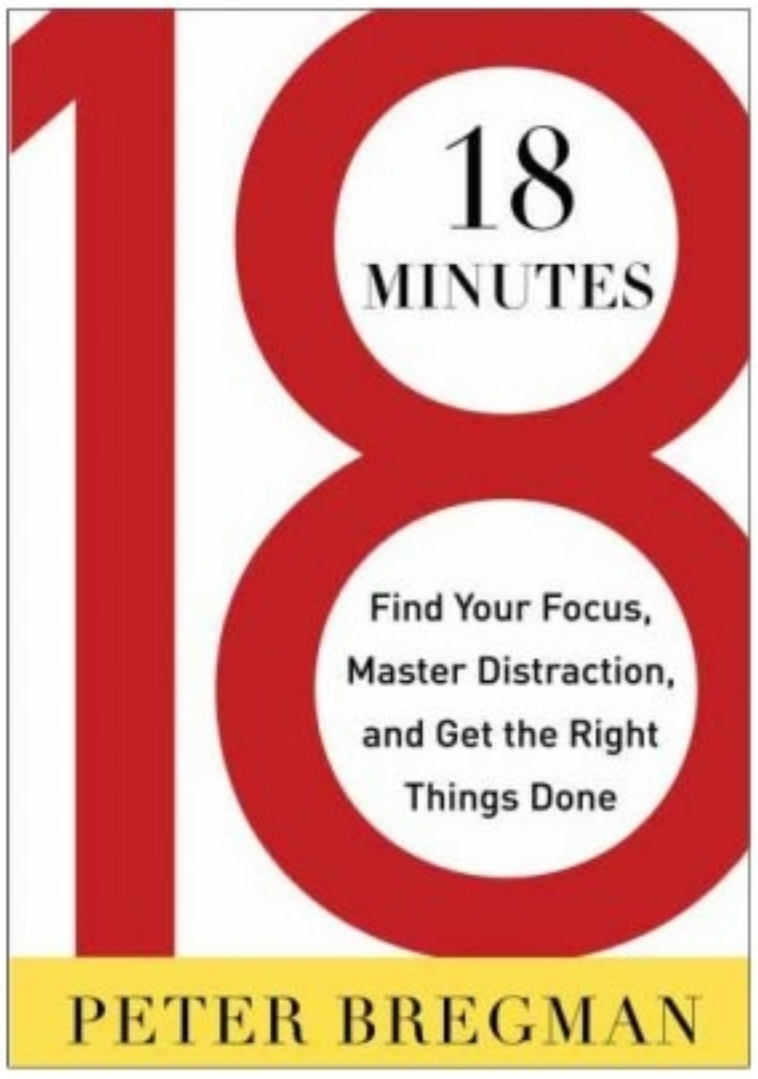
How to manage your day in just 18 minutes



Time management not your forte? Let expert Peter Bregman show you his way In the time it takes you to grab your morning latte, you can plot out your day

Many of us have had days when 5 o'clock rolls around and we have little to show for it. In his new book "18 Minutes: Find Your Focus, Master Distraction, and Get the Right Things Done," management consultant Peter Bregman teaches that it's not about tackling everything on our plate — it's about choosing what to put our energy into.

"We love to procrastinate, and distraction is the golden ring of procrastination because we think we are getting things done," he says. "We are answering 40 e-mails and we think we have been incredibly productive until we stop and say, 'Did I really need to answer all of those e-mails?' In a world that will take what it can from us we need to be more strategic than ever about what we want to give it."

His 18-minute plan can help you figure out how to best manage your workday. Allow him to explain.

▶ Bregman

"I think it's about knowing what you are after and then having these interruptions during the day to make sure you are still running the race that you want to."
BREGMAN, ON HIS 18-MINUTE PLAN

Expert tip

Create an "Ignore List"

"Understanding what you are not going to do paves the path for what you are going to do," Bregman says.

Take five minutes in the morning

"The five minutes in the morning is to get centered and ask yourself, 'What is it that I most want to accomplish today?' I transfer those things onto my calendar. There is a tremendous amount of evidence that points to the fact that if you decide when and where you are going to do something, you'll do it. If you just say, 'I am going to do it sometime today,' you won't end up doing it. So there I am really deciding what I want to get done and where I am going to do it."

Take one minute every hour

"Every hour I stop for one minute and ask myself two questions: 'Am I spending my time in the right way right now?' And: 'Am I being who I most want to be right now?' Those two questions end up being this fantastic productive interruption. Those questions will bring me back to 'What is that I am trying to accomplish for the day?'"

Take five minutes at the end of the day

"At the end of the day I spend five minutes and ask myself, 'What I did I learn from today? What worked, what didn't work?' Then also, who I want to ask a question to, who I want to update, who I want to thank for something they did to me. I think of these as my learning minutes and my gratitude minutes."

Judith P. Swazey
MERGER GAMES
The Medical College of Pennsylvania, Hahnemann University, and the Rise and Fall of the Allegheny Health Care System

When business met academia

We'll give you a hint: It wasn't a love story The drama behind the merger of Philadelphia institutions

In 1994, Hahnemann University Medical College and the Medical College of Pennsylvania merged with Allegheny Health Care System in order to save their fledgling endowments.

According to the new book by Judith P. Swazey, Allegheny's CEO Sherif Abdelhak followed the acquisition by addressing the Hahnemann faculty, pointing his finger at them threateningly and saying, "Don't cross me." If business mergers can be compared to marriages, this one was on the rocks right from "I do."

"Merger Games: The Medical College of Pennsylvania, Hahnemann University, and the Rise and Fall of the Allegheny Health Care System" is Swazey's firsthand account of the only merger between U.S. medical schools in over 80 years. It's a cautionary tale that she hopes will be taken to heart by university leaders around the country.

"Allegheny had a very typical business culture. It was top-down management. Academic institutions — at least in theory — operate by collegial governance. It was a huge clash of cultures," says Swazey. "The faculty of the schools felt they should have a major governance role, but the business culture of Allegheny wouldn't allow that."

By 2000, both HUMC and MCP were no more, Allegheny was bankrupt and Abdelhak faced 1,500 charges of misappropriating funds. Plus, adding to the Rubik's Cube of mergers, Drexel University — along with Tenet Health Systems — had taken over the whole shebang.

BRUCE WALSH
bruce.walsh@metro.us

Lessons learned

No mergers are smooth from the start. "People go into mergers thinking that when the paperwork is done, the thing is a done deal," says Swazey. "But the research on mergers, including my own, shows that if it's going to be successful, it's going to take five to seven years. Everybody involved needs to be prepared for that."

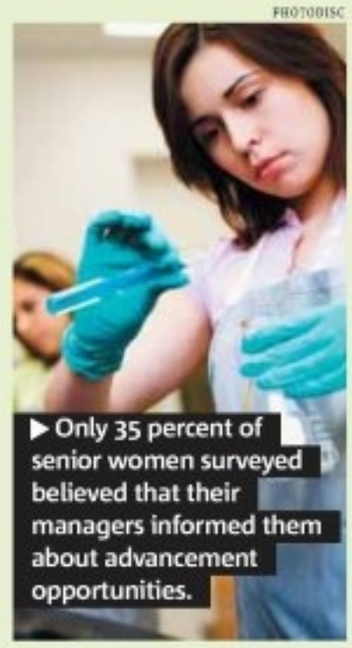
Women plan to leave field of bioscience

Bioscience organizations are in danger of losing some of their top-performing female employees, which could be particularly harmful to companies.

Catalyst — a nonprofit that studies women's opportunities in business — surveyed experts in health care, pharmaceuticals and academic medicine. More than half of the women who responded planned to leave their companies in the next six years; results suggested that this is in part due to opportunities for advancement not being offered to them, as well as salary gaps between men and women.



PHOTODISC

▶ Only 35 percent of senior women surveyed believed that their managers informed them about advancement opportunities.

Underrepresentation of senior female employees is especially harmful for companies looking to evolve: According to the study, women are earning more advanced degrees in some sciences than men, and they are also responsible for the majority of family health care decisions. METRO/MW

The truth about lying on your résumé

What embellishments can you get away with, and what will cost you a job? We asked an expert Why you might want to make some edits

Résumés are tricky documents. While you need to make your skills and experience sound impressive, there's a fine line between fancy wordplay and misrepresentation. And it's a line plenty of us cross, according to a new study by staffing service OfficeTeam. Of more than 1,000 managers surveyed, 36 percent report that job applicants "somewhat often" include inaccurate information on their résumés.

While many candidates attempt to stretch the duration of a past job or misrepresent their levels of education, some inaccuracies aren't intentionally deceitful, says OfficeTeam's Wall Street market manager Daryl Pigat. "They'll think, 'I've worked in Photoshop a million years ago, so I can put that on.' But in fact, they're useless," he says. "It's easy to sit in your room, type up a document and send it out with this mistruth on there. But in person, it's a lot harder to defend."

Managers who see a lot of résumés, like Pigat, can easily spot a suspicious entry — so it's likely you'll never have the chance to explain yourself in person. But if you do, it's best to admit your shortcomings and hope the rest of your interview makes up for it. "We've seen people recover," says Pigat. "When the question does come up, you have to be truthful."

MONICA WEYMOUTH
monica.weymouth@metro.us

By the numbers

Managers were asked: "In your opinion, how often do job applicants include dishonest or exaggerated information on their résumés?"

- Very often: 7 percent
- Somewhat often: 36 percent
- Not very often: 48 percent
- Never: 8 percent
- Don't know: 1 percent

Résumé red flags

Whether you're being dishonest or just sloppy, these common missteps will make your résumé stand out in all the wrong ways:

1. Missing dates: If you leave off the months of employment at your previous jobs, hiring managers will wonder what you're trying to hide. After all, 2009-2010 covers a wide range.
2. Not stating degrees: This, says Pigat, is a classic way to not lie about having a degree, but still include the name of the school and infer a diploma. It will raise suspicions that you did not graduate.
3. Murky phrases such as "familiar with," "involved in," "exposed to": If this is the best way to describe a skill or experience, it's not significant enough to put on your résumé.

No social net for protesters

Most of the so-called Wall Street protesters are unemployed, otherwise they would have been at work and not at the protest. Rather than be busy in a proactive way — such as retraining, improving their present job skills or actively looking for a job — they are using this time to sit there. We should withdraw their unemployment benefits for the days when they are out there. GAROLD MINKIN, VIA E-MAIL

After opening up the Brooklyn Bridge to marching Wall Street protesters and leading them halfway across, the police arrested them. What did the public get out of this? Three unnecessary hours of bridge closing.

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Check your sources once again if there is something for which you've long been searching but haven't yet found.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Your views and opinions will have a greater impact on those whom you counsel than you may realistically expect.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Although you may have thought those financial seeds you recently planted had gone to the winds, you might be pleasantly surprised by signs of sprouting.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. New challenges can be conquered if you draw upon what you've learned from similar experiences in the past. Don't hesitate to put this new knowledge to work.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. If you have something good to contribute, there is no reason why you shouldn't make your presence felt. However, do so in ways that won't make others view you as a right boor.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Because hopeful, new conditions are stirring on the horizon, it is important for you to stay in close touch with valuable contacts. You never know who might throw something your way.
♈ Aries March 21-April 19. If you take it upon yourself to utilize all the assets at your disposal, you can get past any problems that might arise. It's going to be up to you to capitalize on your advantages.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. You have a gift of knowing instinctively how to put everyone at ease. Even though you won't play favorites, each person will go away feeling he or she received special attention.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Instinctively you'll know how to improve your material circumstances without expecting any miracles. You'll understand that all it takes is dedication.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. At this juncture, it's safer to put more stock in your own judgment than in the views of others. Your ability to evaluate developments and draw conclusions is remarkably accurate.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Financial prospects look exceptionally good for you; not because of luck, but because of your own ability to derive gains from multiple sources.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. The answer to whether or not someone to whom you're attracted is just as interested in you may finally come. You'll quickly find the answer by simply spending time in each other's company. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

▶ Phils ace Cliff Lee got a nice ovation from the crowd despite giving up five runs and taking the loss last night in six-plus innings against the Cardinals.

First impressions aren't always accurate. That was definitely so with the Phillies' 5-4 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals last night in Game 2 of the NLDS.

When the Phillies handed Cliff Lee a 4-0 lead after two innings, the game appeared to be in the bank. The Phillies' offense was clicking, especially after Ryan Howard drove in a pair of runs with a first-inning single.

Lee, who entered with a 17-8 regular-season mark, was magnificent over three frames, but the plucky Cards never gave up. Lee was roughed up for five runs and 12 hits after six-plus innings.

After knocking out Chris Carpenter, who lasted only three innings, the Phils struggled against the Cardinals' bullpen.

The Cards, who used six different relievers, set down 15 straight Phillies until Jimmy Rollins singled in the seventh. The Phillies failed to reach second base after scoring in the second and are now tied 1-1 in the NLDS.

The series shifts to St. Louis tomorrow, with Cole Hamels getting the start for the Phillies.

3 things we saw ...

1 Protect the ball — With the lead hanging in the balance, Carlos Ruiz held on to a one-hopper from Raul Ibanez after being bowled over by Jon Jay. Maybe Andy Reid should give Chooch a call in November, if his team continues to struggle protecting the ball.

2 Uncharacteristic Lee — Handing Cliff Lee a 4-0 lead in a playoff game was supposed to be money in the bank, right? Especially after handing the ace a $120 million contract this past December. But Philadelphia's most popular athlete coughed up the four-spot and absorbed his first playoff loss as a Phillie. Say it ain't so, Cliff.

3 At least Lidge looked good — Brad Lidge kept the Phillies in the game with a terrific seventh inning. The former closer entered the game with men on first and third with nobody out and escaped without giving up a run.

Batting average for Jimmy Rollins so far this postseason. He went 3-for-4 last night with two doubles off the top of the wall.

Packed house

With the Eagles letting a 20-point lead slip away across the street, Citizens Bank Park was the place to be this past weekend.

- A crowd of 46,575 filed into Citizens Bank Park last night, breaking the record for the largest crowd there.
- Game 1 drew 46,480 fans, which was the third-largest in the stadium's history.

'Boys fall, Lions still perfect

This time, it was the bad Tony Romo.

The Cowboys quarterback threw two late interceptions that were both returned for touchdowns, as Detroit roared back to steal a 34-30 win yesterday in Dallas.

The Lions overcame a 24-point, third-quarter deficit to remain undefeated at 4-0. Matthew Stafford completed the comeback with a pair of touchdowns, including a 2-yard TD strike to Calvin Johnson with 1:39 left. METRO

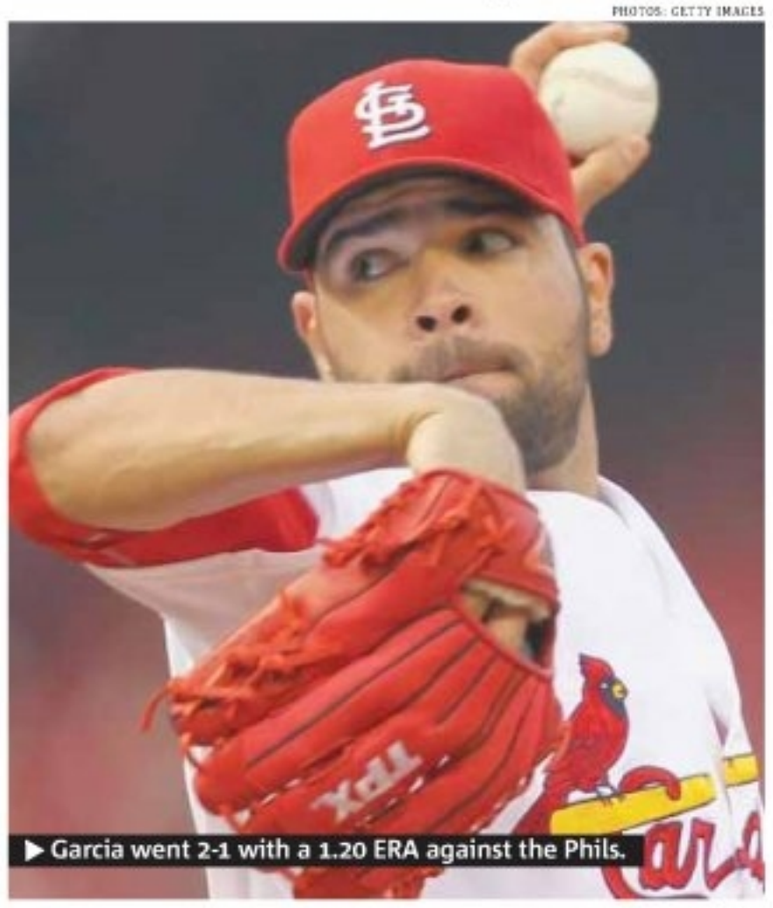
Cards hope Garcia is their Phillies killer

LaRussa tabs left-hander as series shifts to St. Louis ◗ Holliday likely out again for Game 3 ◗ Manuel, Victorino preach patience against Garcia

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES



▶ Garcia went 2-1 with a 1.20 ERA against the Phils.

A sea of red will greet the Phillies when they play Game 3 of the NLDS series tomorrow at Busch Stadium. However, the capacity crowd sporting Cardinal red won't be so friendly to Charlie Manuel and his squad.

It'll be a tougher environment in the park and possibly on the field. Cards skipper Tony LaRussa has slated Phillies killer Jaime Garcia — 2-1 with a 1.20 ERA in six starts against them — to pitch.

"Garcia has always pitched good against us," Manuel said. "He's a guy that likes to get ahead in the count, and his command definitely plays big. And in order for us to be successful on him, we've got to make him bring the ball up and be patient with him. And our right-handed hitters have to definitely have some success against him."

Patience may be the key against Garcia, who has gone six innings or fewer in seven of his past 10 starts. If the Phillies can make him work and get to the Cards' tired bullpen, that would bode well for the NL Eastern division champs. (The Phillies were a club-record 50-31 on the road this season.)

"It would be great if we could make pitchers throw as many pitches as possible, but sometimes that's easier said than done," Shane Victorino said. "But we'll try to do that."

It would be more challenging for the Phillies if slugger Matt Holliday is in the lineup. It looks like Holliday, suffering with a finger injury, is doubtful.

"I don't know about [Holliday playing]," LaRussa said. "I'm more concerned than I was before [Saturday's] game because he took an at-bat [in Game 1] and he did have soreness when he swung."

Roadster crashes party

First four-cylinder engine for BMW in 12 years 20 percent better than predecessors, company says

One writer's insight to the vehicle

▶ The casual observer won't think any less of you if you own one of these.

BMW

Like cops shutting down a raucous frat night, federal gas-mileage restrictions are busting up the binge that's led sports car companies to make ever more powerful autos.

Now that party's over.

With corporate average fuel economy set at 34.1 miles per gallon by 2016, 500-hp supercars that chug petrol by the keg are going to need to start considering moderation.

Which brings us to the latest BMW Z4 convertible, with a new, less-powerful engine. Available this autumn, it's the first four-cylinder from the company in a dozen years.

To sports car enthusiasts, that probably sounds like a big uh-oh.

The change is making my head throb all right, but in a good way. I'm slinging the roadster along a mountain road shaped like an EKG readout. While the abstrusely named Z4 sDrive28i is less powerful than its six-cylinder predecessor, I'm not missing those two extra chambers one bit.

The two-seat, hardtop roadster starts at $49,525 and is better-balanced than the naturally aspirated sDrive30i it replaces.

Horsepower may have dropped to 240 from 255, but torque has increased to 260 pound feet from 220. Which means it has more grunt from a standstill and ample power in lower gears — perfect for scrambling through mountain passes, which is the kind of thing buyers are actually looking for in a roadster. BLOOMBERG

At a glance

The newest Z4 model brings it a little different, but you could look at it two ways.

- Engine: 2.0-liter, turbocharged four-cylinder with 240 horsepower and 260 pound-feet of torque
- Transmission: Six-speed manual or eight-speed automatic
- Speed: 0 to 60 mph in 5.5 seconds
- Gas mileage per gallon: 21 city; 33 highway (estimated)
- Best feature: Efficiency without sacrifice
- Worst feature: $50,000 is a pricey starting point.
- Target buyer: The sports driver who isn't afraid to go smaller

Toyota, Honda ask: 'What Recession?'

Japan's Big Two automakers back to full production for first time since earthquake Their sales in US suggest auto industry on whole rebounding

KEVORK DJANSEZIAN/GETTY IMAGES

▶ The redesigned 2012 Toyota Camry SE goes on sale in December.

Toyota and Honda's return to full production this month is boosting U.S. auto sales back near the pace reached before Japan's earthquake.

September light-vehicle sales, to be released today, probably rose to a 12.8 million seasonally adjusted annual rate, the average estimate of 14 analysts surveyed by Bloomberg. That would be the fastest pace since April, when lost output caused by Japan's tsunami crimped supply of parts and finished cars.

"Recovering inventory levels have helped to bring buyers back into the market," said Jeff Schuster, executive director of global forecasting at J.D. Power & Associates.

Jesse Toprak, who develops forecasts at TrueCar.com, went so far as to title his latest report "What Recession?" as the auto rebound defies consumer confidence that is near a two-year low. Toyota has said it expects to reverse monthly U.S. sales declines beginning next month, and Honda is adding overtime shifts at two Ohio plants. Better supply also probably meant incentives rose from the lowest in almost six years.

"The big story this month was better inventory and favorable pricing [for consumers]," said Jessica Caldwell, an analyst at Santa Monica, Calif.-based Edmunds.com. BLOOMBERG

Toyota slipped behind Ford to third in U.S. sales this year through August.

Report: GM, Ford almost merged

DETROIT. General Motors Chief Executive Officer Rick Wagoner secretly proposed a merger with Ford in 2008, a year before GM's bankruptcy filing, the New York Times has reported.

Ford Chairman Bill Ford and Chief Executive Alan Mulally held talks with Wagoner before turning down the offer, according to the article, adapted from Bill Vlasic's "Once Upon a Car: The Fall and Resurrection of America's Big Three Automakers — G.M., Ford and Chrysler," to be published Oct. 4.
